The Center of Attention

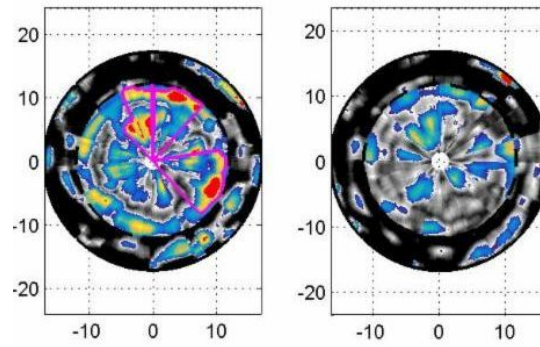

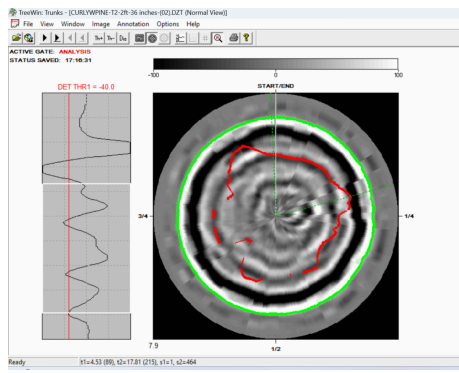

This 34"-diameter Eastern White Pine is the cherished natural centerpiece of this homeowner's landscape, home, and swimming pool area. At approximately 120' in height, it dwarfs all the other trees and structures in the adjacent area. Based on knowledge from the property owner, the tree is easily 100 years old. It is the irreplaceable object of this privately owned personal river resort. So, is it safe? The 2"-wide crack in the trunk, pictured below, requires the most precise and accurate view possible to correctly diagnose.

No Room for Error

This a very tight area containing a house, pool house, swimming pool, and this massive Eastern White Pine. Two separate tree professionals recommended removal based on soundings and visual inspections. Both concluded the trunk was hollow and decayed. Images clearly show slight compromise in the trunk and in the area of the crack. Removal would have cost thousands of dollars and was not necessary. With precise, accurate information, the owner wasn't left with regret from a wrong decision. ITI makes hard decisions easy!
